Mr. Ingalls on the Rate Situation. As it is alleged that the late demoralizaion in rates was brought about by the Kanawha Despatch operating over the Chesapeake & Ohlo, of which M. E. Ingalls is president, anything he says regard- ings. ing the rate situation is read with interest, as it is very essential that the Big Four and the C. & O. lines may maintain rates if rates are held to tariff by all lines. In discussing the rate situation in New York, Mr. Ingalls said:

"Railroad business in the West is good to-day. The gravity of the railroad situation is passenger business, not the through traffic, but the every-day, steady travel, Our Big Four lines have 2,500 miles of track through a thickly settled country. The increase in our passenger business for the past three months has been larger than any increase since 1892. It is better to-day than it has ever been for the same months in any year. Wheat transportation is a small item directly to railroads. Over our lines it is but 2 per cent, of the revenue. Corn is king. It makes the cattle, the whisky, the pigs, and so furnishes the ev-ery-day business for the railroads. The bigin sight, and nothing short of a great con- doubled tracked within three years. vulsion of nature can affect it. After the years ago, rates steadled up for a year or secret cuttings and contracts. Downward rates continued to progress. Now and then their fall was stayed for a month or two on resolutions of reform. But in June last rates had reached lower depths than were ever thought possible. Since July 8 last rallroads have been nearer to tariff rates than for five years past. It is necessary that better rates be had for the proon of railroads, employes and the genera! interests of the community. In the first place, the interests involved are so normous that we cannot have permanent prosperity so long as the large investments n railroads are in danger."

The New System of Discipline. So much interest is taken in the new method of discipline which has been inaugurated on the Panhandle lines that a brief synopsis of the chief features of the Ecctricity for Trunk Lines.

Regarding the story that an electric road between New York and Chicago, with an average speed of 150 miles an hour is now being promoted by Chicago and Eastern capitalists, Assistant Manager Theodore P. Errors in Reorganizing. An attorney of this city who has had much to do with reorganizing railways and has made a success of his methods says that one of the mistakes most commonly made is that the bonded debt, stock, etc., is not scaled down to the extent it should be. Often the capitalization and the funded debt remain as prior lien to the test resulted in a tie. The case will now go to the grand counsel. The New York delegates are fighting hard to secure the head-quarters and the Chicago delegates to reroad's going into bankruptcy, and only a said he, "should recognize the fact that old standards are useless. Conditions with railways of this country have changed. The railroads used to get 2, 3 and 4 chais per ton per mile on their freight. Interest charges based on profits at rates much higher than those which have prevailed for three months past are not safe unless the bonded debt of a majority of the roads is scaled down. General Agent Baker, of the White line, expresses surprise at the business his line is doing, notwithstanding the restoration of rates, it being double the tonnage of July last year. A Northern Pacific man who was in the city yesterday said neither the charter of the Northern Pacific nor the Great North-ern would permit the consolidation of the wo systems, and he thought that President Hill, of the Great Northern, has as much now as he could take care of, adding: "What will the courts say to Mr. Hill's proposition to have the Northern Pacific, more than three thousand miles in length with a land grant of forty million acres from the United States government, under the control of a parallel and competing neighbor, the Great Northern?" Great pots of molten metal are now daily transported over the Erie road from the Cleveland rolling mills to the Newburg mills, a distance of five miles. It takes just fifteen minutes for the metal, after it is poured into the big ladle cars, to reach the mixer in the mills, some five miles away. CONTEXT.-After the burial of Nadab and Abihu the ordinary course of life was resumed in the Israelitish camp. Further laws were delivered for the government of the institutions that had been set up. Much emphasis was laid on the subject of purification as a preparation for worship. Then came enactments pertaining to the The Chesapeake & Ohio was operated in June this year on 644 per cent. of its gross earnings, in 1894 on 654 per cent., while in 1893 it took 76 per cent. of its gross earncensus was taken by tribes, showing that there were more than six hundred thousand men able to go forth to war. (Numb 46.) The order and location of the tribes with reference to the tabernacle was also determined, both when they were in camp and on the march. The Levites were formally instructed concerning their | them that hate Thee flee before Thee," duties. A year had now passed since Israel came out of Egypt, and the passover was duly observed. A fixed signal, the removal of the cloud (Numb. ix, 17-23), was appointed for the journeying, and two silver trumpets were made for calling the people. On the twentieth day of the second month in the second year, Israel left the wilderness of Sinai and moved toward hearts; be Thou our guest and let us enjoy the wilderness of Paran. (Numb. x, 11-13.) the sweet repose possible only through communion with Thee. In these two forms of prayer Moses expressed his willingness to the wilderness of Paran. (Numb. x, 11-13.) fugitive in the land of Midian (Ex. ii, 21), forty years before the exodus. When he led Israel out of Egypt his father-in-law suant to the Master's direction, the disciple ne to visit him, bringing his wife, who had been left behind (Ex. xviii, 1) until her husband's mission should be manifest. When the old gentleman returned (Ex. xviii, 27), Hobab, his son, tarried in the camp, content to make a visit with his sister and brother-in-law. Now that Israel was to move on toward Canaan, Moses invited him to become permanently attached to the congregation and accomany them. As an inducement he declared that the Lord had spoken good concerning Israel, referring doubtless to the promise made to Abraham (Gen. xxxii, 12) as well as to himself. (Ex. iii, 8; vi, 7, 8.) He also emphasized the fact that they were going to a land which had been promised to them (Gen. xvii, 8) for a possession. And he coupled the invitation with a promise on his part to do good to Habab if he accepted the invitation. This was certainly a most generous and flattering offer. For, while many occurrences during the temporary stay showed how idolatrous and disobedient the people were, the same events had exhibited the glory and the power and the wisdom of Moses. On the whole it was an encouraging outlook, calculated to excite the ambition of any man. HESITATION.—But Hobab did not yield to the offer of his brother-in-law. "I will not go," was his flat refusal. And he proceeded to give his reason. "I will return to my own land," an adjacent district, part of the Sinaitic peninsula. He preferred the distant and unknown land of promise and hope. And he added: "I will return to my own kindred." Who were they? The Midianites (Ex. xviii, 1), the descendants of Abraham by Keturah, the second wife of that eminent patriarchi Gen. xxv, 1-4.) Ho-bab's father was a shepherd priest (Ex. ii, 16), and his words on several occasions indicated that he worshipped the God of Israel (Ex. xviii, 17-19); that he was a wise and good man. It was while in his employ that Moses had heard the voice of God, appointing him leader. (Ex. iii, 1, 2.) But people were outside the Abrahamic covenant. They were not heirs to the prom ises. They were not in the line of the Mes-sianic hope. And so the love of country its new home. It is not strange that the decision was made. Blood, religion, home-these ties are not easily severed. ENTREATY.-Moses did not falter in His purpose. "Leave us not, I pray thee," He pleaded. He argued the case in earnest words, Israel would pass through an unknown wilderness, pitching their tents at in-tervals. The way would be beset with many difficulties and dangers. Enemies would rise up against them-the Ishmaelites, the Amorites and the Moabites. But Hobab knew all this region, His pastoral life had taken him over vast sections of it. He knew the people. He could therefore furnish needed information-in fact, his services were essential to the expedition. In all this pleading Moses exhibited His wisdom. His faith in God did not lead him to presumption—he took all possible precau-tion against defeat, and sought every available help to insure success. (Luke xvi. 9.) Moreover, the argument was a most force ul one for every true man. He would have Hobab feel that he might be useful-he would thereby appeal to the higher nature and secure his relative by a consecration to the interests of a great cause, so overming any feeling of personal preference.

and of kin was stronger than all the promises made by Moses, than all the attractions of the new nation about to march to PROMISE.—And yet the case was not lef gh of the general features of humanity to offer a reward for the service he sought. (Heb. xii, 2.) Even Jesus, the Savior, had regard to the outcome of his lifework, and was thereby strengthened to endure the cross, and Moses denied present for future good. (Heb. xi, 25.) And so on this occasion the promise was made to the Midianite, "What goodness the Lord shall do unto us, the same will he do unto thee." (Verse 32.) That was the same as the promise in the first invitation, only it was supported by the goodness of the Lord. It did not rest on the faithfulness of Moses, but on the ability and mercy of Jehovah. Hobab has now all the elements for an intelligent choice. (Josh. xxiv, 15.) Behind him were the broad pasture lands of his native country, and all the associates of the years gone by; before him the new world, the new hopes, to be se-cured by alliance with Israel under the lessing of God. Our lesson does not record his decision. There are passages in after history (Judges, i, 16, iv. 11) to indicate that he went, for the Kenites were Midianites. But some have thought that Hobab still re fused, and that relatives accompanied REMOVAL -- At last the tents were struck and Israel moved away. The order of the march, Judah in the lead, is fully described. (Numb, x, 14-28.) The ark of the covenant went before, borne by the Levites. The destination, the next camping place (Numb. xii, 10), was north of Sinal, where, four hundred years before, the son of Hagar was saved from death (Gen. xxi, 21), which had since become the home of the Ishmaelites. After traveling three days, however, a halt was made, probably to secure refreshment for continuing the journey. We might easily picture that vast multitude of people, spread out over the plain. We might image ine the emotions that filled their heartsthe hopes of the young, the memeories of the aged, the fears of the unbelievers, the aith of those who trusted in God. No such exodus ever occurred in the history of the race. And, while we might indulge in criticism of this Hebrew-Egyptian congregation, they deserved honor. For they were separating themselves from the land of their birth, marching to Canaan, because of revelations made to the land of their birth. lations made to their leader, to become the people of God. (Ex. ili, 7, 8.) PRESENCE.-One feature in that journey deserves attention more than any other. "The cloud of the Lord was upon them," or over them, "when they went out." By this they were protected from the intense heat of the torrid heat of the sun (Psalm exxi, 6), and, what was more important, hey were assured of God's presence, a guarantee of safety and success. (Isa. iv. 5). SATURDAY, THE 10th DAY OF AUGUST, That cloud had already become to them a symbol and a blessing. It first appeared while they were in Egypt (Ex. xiii, 21); it followed them over the Red sea and hung between them and their enemies (Ex. xiv. 19, 20), and it directed them to Sinai and settled down upon the tabernacle after it was sent up. (Ex. xl. 38). How ought they now to rejoice as that cloud led them forth from Sinai toward Paran. If the soldier is inspired to heroic deeds by the form and word of his commander, by the strains of martial music, or by the flag of his country waving at the head of the column. much more might the heart gain strength as the eyes beheld the chariot cloud of God, moving slowly toward the promised land.

PRAYER.—Moses's plety was exhibited in a new form during the journeying. When the cloud lifted and moved forward, he exclaimed, "Rise up, Lord," saying in substance, "We are ready to go when Thou shalt order." And then he added, "Let Thine enemies be scattered; let

GENTLEMEN: I feel it my duty to inform you of the great good I have received from

Dr. J. H. McLEAN'S LIVER AND KIDNEY BALM.

I am sure it saved my life. I suffered for several years with Bright's Disease, aggravated by gravel in the left kidney. About two years ago the trouble got so bad that I could not leave my bed; had night sweats, extreme weakness, chills and my flesh had a blanched look. I did not expect to get well again. Eighteen months ago I began using the Liver and Kidney Balm. I used at first two bottles, which helped me so much I could leave the bed and go about my household duties; so I continued with it. I also began to pass the gravel. In all I passed five stones. I am now feeling entirely cured, but still taking the Baim occasionally to make sure. Doctor, I am unable to express my gratitude to God for my restoration to health, and I owe it, even my present existence, to your Liver and Kidney Balm. It is a grand medicine, Yours respectfully,

At the request of the writer of the above the name is omitted, but it will be furnished in strict confidence to any who wish to investigate this case.
